The applicant has prepared a revised layout plan, which includes amendments to the orientation of Units 210-212 such that they now face towards the access road rather than being at 90 degrees to it; this ensures a better relationship to the street. The applicant has also undertaken some amendments to the design and appearance of the apartment block, which reduces its scale such that the third floor is now within the roofspace with dormer windows to provide appropriate daylight and outlook. However, it is still considered that the fenestration treatment to the apartments requires further amendment as the proportion of windows is too small in relation to the extent of brickwork. Accordingly, it has been agreed with the applicant that the fenestration treatment in terms of the size of windows can be the subject of a planning condition given that the overall form and scale of the apartments are acceptable. Accordingly, it is necessary to revise Condition 2 in relation to the approved drawings list and add an additional condition requiring further details of window sizes to the apartments:
